(FOR ADDRESS ONLY.)

The Parade. Westcliff-on-Sea has, thanks to the enterprise of the railway company, been brought near enough to the metropolis to be the residence of many City men. It is to Southend what Westgate-on-Sea is to Margate—a select place for those who do not enjoy noisy or obtrusive diversions. Mr. Coulson Kernahan, author of "God and the Ant," writes enthusiastically of Westcliff-on-Sea.
